Corruption has continued to be a major factor undermining effective and sustainable growth and development in Sierra Leone in spite of the efforts and initiatives made by the government. Consequently, though being a country well endowed with natural resources specifically mineral resources, the country has continued to be ranked low in terms of human and overall national development and among the poorest countries in the world. Similarly, it has not been able to score above the 35% in Transparency International's Corruption Perception Index. The pervasiveness of corruption also made it impossible for the country to pass the threshold of the Millennium Challenge Corporation (MCC) Grant in 2012.

This situation has led to high poverty, illiteracy and unemployment levels. Though successive governments have tried to curb corruption by introducing anti corruption reforms, the practice of corruption has become so innate that those efforts have not yielded the desired results

The persistence of corruption has continued to undermine judicious mobilization and utilization of the states resources to the extent that the country highly depends on donor support to fund its national budget. This is a principal factor for the continuous social and economic developmental challenges facing the country. This has led to the persistent high level of poverty, unemployment, poor human capacity development and underdevelopment.

The recent ebola outbreak and the inability of the government to initially stem the spread exposed the weak state of the country's health sector which had been marred with corrupt practices.

Agencies set up to promote transparency and accountability and combat corruption have continued to face numerous challenges which have undermined their ability to be effective and thus they have made minimal impact. There is an obvious lack of political commitment to the anti corruption campaign and in spite of the zero tolerance stance taken by the President when assuming office in 2007 and the efforts made so far to strengthen the Anti-Corruption law and granting prosecutorial powers to the Anti-Corruption Commission, corruption remains a major challenge in all sectors.

TI-SL firmly believes that in order for the Anti-Corruption efforts to be effective there must first of all be a proactive and sustained engagement of non state actors as a pressure group to curb systemic corruption. This also requires vigilance, political awareness, and an informed citizenry empowered to resist and report corruption and challenge the abuse of power. There is also the need for a grass root approach that challenges the cultural support of corruption.

To achieve this, civil society in Sierra Leone needs to effectively and proactively engage in the anti-corruption campaign. Only an active civil society that's effectively engages with horizontal and vertical mechanisms of accountability can substantially challenge the endemic problems of corruption in the society. Only an all out campaign of influence can produce the sweeping institutional reforms and innovations that will create a comprehensive sustainable system of accountability.

It is against this background that TI-SL as a member of the Transparency International Global Movement has developed its Annual Work Plan for 2017 to respond to these challenges.

Profile of Transparency International Sierra Leone

Transparency International Sierra Leone (TISL) formerly the National Accountability Group is a local non-profit, non-governmental anti-corruption advocacy civil society organization established as a taskforce in 2001 under Campaign for Good Governance and re-organized as an independent NGO in July 2004. In March 2008, TISL was granted a National Chapter in Formation Status by Transparency International Secretariat in Berlin, Germany. In September 2010, it was granted a Full Chapter Status which was renewed in 2013.

TISL work is geared towards achieving greater accountability, transparency and integrity in private and public affairs and is mainly dedicated to curb corruption; by holding local and national governments and public duty bearers accountable to the people of Sierra Leone, ensuring citizens are able to demand accountability and transparency from duty bearers whilst at the same time inculcating those values themselves and to assist victims of corrupt practices.

Vision Statement

TISL's vision is to have a country in which the Government, the business community, private sector, civil society and the daily lives of the people are free from corruption and its negative effects.

Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning

Monitoring and Evaluation (M+E) will guide the performance and measure the effective level of achievement of the five Strategic Priorities set in this Strategic Plan. TISL will ensure to implement the plan, present periodic management reports on activities implemented and create the link how they meet the desired objectives or targets. In this regard therefore, the Advisory Board, Members and programme staff of TISL have the responsibility to ensure that objectives and goals set for the various activities in the operational are implemented in accordance with the plan.

Monitoring and Evaluation indicators will be developed in the operational plan and the annual work plan. For each indicator, targets will be set that are achievable and directly related to the strategic priorities, objectives and expected results.

The purpose of monitoring and evaluating the strategic plan is to:

- Ensure that TISL's Strategic Priorities, goals and objectives achieved;
- Track the inputs and outputs against the plan
- Identify opportunities and challenges that may impact or affect planned activities
- Learn and document best practices for experience sharing

Monitoring will be done on an ongoing basis using the detailed programme of action for implementation. The approach will be periodic review by the members and Advisory Board of TISL;

Levels of monitoring and evaluation:

This will be done on:

- a. Monthly basis;
- b. Quarterly basis
- c. Half yearly basis;
- d. Annually basis;
- e. Midterm review;

Report and Documentation

Mechanisms will be instituted by the Advisory Board and Members of TISL to ensure that descriptive and analytical reports are produced. This would include challenges faced by TISL in the implementation of the strategic plan, funding issues, implementation bottle necks and successes scored in the implementation of the plan.
